Admin history: The National Union of Mineworkers is a trade union for coal miners in the United Kingdom. Formed in 1945 as a reorganisation of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain (MFGB), which was established in 1889. The South Wales Miners' Federation was set up in 1898 to unite the miners of the South Wales area.

The miners' unions were for much of the 20th century a powerful force not only in the British union movement, but also in British politics. The NUM took part in three national miners' strikes in 1972, 1974 and 1984-85. Its influence was destroyed by the failure of the 1984-85 strike and by the closing of most of Britain's coal mines; it is now a small union with negligible political power.

Archive history: Accession 845, with the original references D845/1-115 were deposited by the National Union of Mineworkers, South Wales area. Items numbered D845/60-113 were later returned to the depositor and D845/114-115 were transferred to Gwent Archives Library as they are printed books. An additional deposit (accession 1216) was accepted into the collection and records were given the references D845/60-77, replacing the numbers of some of the returned items that were included in accession 845.
